LAKE CUMBERLAND SWING INTO SPRING WORKSHOP

By: Barbara Elko

(Printed here is a portion of the article due to space, please visit Clog.org here to see more on this fun adventure.)

No better way to SWING INTO SPRING than a workshop. The location for this event is Lake Cumberland State Resort Park in Southern Kentucky. My foursome arrived two days early allowing extra time to explore the breathtaking surroundings. The lodge rooms were spacious and included a furnished porch, which overlooked the majestic lake. We soon discovered food or anything remotely edible could not be left on the porch. Crafty, raccoons easily climbed from porch to porch, looking for their next meal. After chewing through a soft sided cooler and finding only aluminum cans they quickly moved on to our neighbors porch. An early lesson... it was essential to leave everything in the room and keep the porch door closed!

We dumped our luggage and immediately hit the Lake Buff Nature Loop, a four mile trail. Shortly into our walk we encountered a fork in the road, just what this challenged group needed, a choice. The sure bet was, stay to the right and have a leisurely walk back to the lodge. Veering to the left, we started the steep descent to the marina. Lake Cumberland is famous for house boating, and a variety of boats and water crafts may be rented. Back at the lodge we inquired about trail maps, that is when our real adventure began.

A sign on the counter said the last egg, "the golden egg" of the resorts egg hunt had not been found. There was a prize for finding the "golden egg". We had planned on hiking anyway so why not search for the golden egg. We had planned on hiking anyway so why not search for the golden egg. A couple of clues were provided...

one way in one way out, and if you tire, rest on a bench near by. The clues practically unveiled the hidden egg. After searching for about 30 minutes we continued walking the trail, looking up, down, and all around for the egg. The workshop did not start for another day so we decided to return Baugh Branch Trail at the break of dawn. In good spirits after a good night rest we drove the 3.6 miles back to the trail. We spent three hour scouring the entire trail twice. We spent three more hours scouring the entire trail twice. Our search was so thorough we concluded an animal of some sort took the egg. I quietly suggested getting up early in the morning to look again. The dirty, sweaty group moaned, they had given up! Even though we did not find the "golden egg" the nine hours we spent together on a beautiful day in the woods of Lake Cumberland Kentucky was priceless!

The dance hall was in a building adjacent to the lodge. Everyone was gearing up for a night of clogging, it was a lively warm atmosphere. Trevor DeWitt was a perfect host, he made his way around the room welcoming and thanking everyone for coming. Melissa Pack and Missy Shinoski were the featured instructors. Jeff Driggs was present without his boot, but his doctor's strict orders were no clogging. No need to tell you how that played out. Always busy as organizers of clogging events, Johanna and Mike Healy are seldom seen on the dance floor. This weekend was an exception, they did a fine job of cutting the rug, as did their daughter Emerson. There were a remarkable number of dancers attending this workshop for the first time, including my foursome. It was obvious from the start we were in for a treat. The familiar national dance list, some easy teaches and of course Cotton Eye Joe were the evenings menu of dances. As the fun dance concluded several folks asked...Have you found the golden egg?

If I were asked to define fickle, my answer would be the time at Lake Cumberland. It changes frequently between central and eastern standard time. Friday night we set the phone alarm for 6am while seating on the bed in our hotel room. We set the phone on the table and turned in. When the alarm went off in the morning we began showering and having breakfast, all the while wondering why it was so dark. Turns out the bed was eastern

On the beat..... New Workshop!!

ROCKING AT THE RIDGE

BY: BARBARA ELKO

This one day workshop, Rocking At The Ridge, was held at the Jones Dance Academy, In Mineral Ridge Ohio, on June 22nd. It began at 10:00 giving those driving time to arrive. Finally a workshop that was not squeezed among many others. Host, Jeigh Maynard did a fantastic job! This was her first attempt hosting a workshop and it went off without a hitch. The group of volunteers were exceptional. Dancers were greeted at the registration desk, signed in, and then given a personal tour. The on site food was delicious and plentiful. Two halls were available....wooden floors! An unique feature of this workshop were the floor to ceiling mirrors. Huge fans keep things cool all day. The size of the facility was adequate. Parking was free.

Studio One		Studio Three

5:00pm	Jason Pflugh Sun Don't Let Me Down Beginner/Pre	Katie Koehnle I'll Be There For You Beginner/Pre
6:00pm	Fun Dance

The line up of instructors included Jason Pflugh, Chris Phelps, Andrew Perry, Katie Koehnle, and Jeigh Maynard. Jason Pflugh had intermediate routines to Roads We've Never Taken, Whiskey's Gone, and Sun Don't Let Me Down. The dancers really enjoyed Whiskey's Gone it was one that Jason taught some time ago and it was fun. Chris Phelps shared a high intermediate routine to the song Runaway Baby. He had an intermediate to Fix. Something different for Chris a routine to a country song I Just Got Started Loving You. Andrew Perry used the songs Booty Swing, and Rodeo & Juliet. His personal favorite of the day was Friend Like Me. Andrew was very excited to share this. Newly wed Katie Koehnle showed a routine to I'll Be There For You the theme song from the TV series Friends. Her routine to Every Good Thing had some hands movements to mix things up. She also had a solid routine to the song Rise. Host, Jeigh Maynard taught two intermediate plus routines. Both routines were to country music, Awe Nah and Look At Me Now. Her routines were fun and had a nice flow.

Rocking At The Ridge ran for seven hours non stop. The workshop concluded with an hour long fun dance. Clogging with a bunch of happy folks, was a great way to kick summer into gear. Thanks you Jeigh, the friendly volunteers, the staff, and all the folks that attended you made it a great day on the dance floor! Plans for next years Rocking At The Ridge are still in the planning stage.

standard time, the table central. It was actually 5am when the alarm rang. Now the challenged foursome was also sleep deprived.

Saturday classes began a 8:00 central time. Lord knows we were up early enough to be on time for the first class. Clogging took place in the main hall or on the balcony. Both overlooked the lake. The balcony was undercover but had opened sides. Trevor got the workshop underway in the main hall with a fun routine to a relaxing song titled Make It Sweet. The great thing about this workshop it was a CUE AND DO. After each class everyone was invited back to the main hall. Everything that was taught that hour was danced through with cues, so you were able to record and or dance all of the offerings. Melissa Pack was ready with an intermediate routine to the song Wildfire. Missy Shinoski offered a two for one, both were basic level. It was amazing how Missy was able to challenge the dancers with 8 basics. Next Jeff Driggs taught a Bluegrass, and Melissa Pack shared a Christian to the song What A Friend. Missy made her advanced teach to a song titled Simple look simple. At the same time Jeff Driggs was showing and intermediate plus country to the song Somewhere Down The Line. The tired, hungry, dancers welcomed the hour break for lunch.

I coxed my foursome to skip lunch and return to the woods. Lauren Shinoski, Missy's daughter, was asked to join the search and she accepted. With Lauren's fresh perspective surely we would find the egg. Returning to the first bench the five of us began sweeping the woods. Once again we failed to find the egg. Disheartened we returned to the lodge. As we pulled into the lodge parking lot the ranger saw us. She gave us another clue, which condensed the search area considerably. The new clue acted like a shot of adrenaline, we put the car in reverse and drove back to the trail. This time we agreed we would not leave the woods without the egg. After fifteen minutes frustration set in still no egg. Suddenly a scream echoed throughout the woods, found it! There in the base of a hollow tree stump buried under decaying wood sat the golden egg. Inside the egg was a compass to help us in future hiking endeavors. There was also a note informing us our prize was at the desk lodge. There was a loud celebration when we entered the lobby with the egg. Our egg search had a growing fan club. We collected a generous prize, then returned to the workshop.

The classes on the balcony were absolutely refreshing! It was hard concentrating on steps while looking at the absolutely beautiful lake! On the balcony Jeff taught Come Alive, Trevor shared Keep It Simple. Melissa and Rob Pack taught a hoedown on the balcony, it was accompanied with confusion and laughter. The inside hall offerings were Timebomb with Missy Shinoski, Clap your hands with Melissa Pack, What a Day with Trevor DeWitt, and Dance Dance Dance with Jeff. The afternoon classes were simply outstanding! All of the routines were great, they were a good mix for everyone to enjoy.

The fun dance began at seven with a fury. Several groups de-moed. The Backliners are group of friends who have not danced together for awhile. It was fun watching them having fun dancing. Eric Biey rocks, he used the entire floor, great facial expressions, and crazy footwork while entertaining the crowd. He is one talented dancer! Melissa and Rob Pack put their band of inexperienced folks out for a hoedown, the results were interesting. For many the most memorable part of the evening was a tradition

Steve Smith started. The American Flag was placed center stage, with a light shining on it. The remaining lights were turned off. Everyone stood hand in hand and sang God Bless The USA. It was special. After a few hours the fun dance concluded and the farewells began.

This was a golden workshop. If you have not attended SWING INTO SPRING come discover the riches of this workshop.

P.S. Our prize for finding the golden egg...2 nights of camping and 1 night at Lure Lodge free of charge. Trevor we'll be back!
